

Magistrates Ask Stricter Traffic Laws

Casualties in City Streets
Like Battlefield, Says
One; 49 Killed in Month

Law Faulty, Says Hugo

Court to Draft Legislation;
Want Right to Revoke
Licenses of Chauffeurs

The casualties in the city streets are like those on the battlefields of France," said Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo yesterday at a meeting at the Traffic Court. The meeting was called to determine the possibility of passing a law insuring strict examination of all drivers of motor vehicles and providing for the revocation or suspension of incapable chauffeurs. A committee was appointed with Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb as chairman to draft a bill.

Edward S. Cornell, secretary of the National Highway Association, was not present. He announced a few days ago that "what we need now is action." "There ought to be no more talk and no more meetings," he said recently, "until a bill is introduced at this session of the legislature. Such meetings do not lead to anything."

The meeting was much like the one a year ago attended only by the magistrates. Magistrate Frederick B. House, Special Police Commissioner John A. Harris, in charge of traffic, Robert Grier Cooke, of the Fifth Avenue Association; Jefferson De Mont Thompson, of the Broadway Association; Charles J. Gorman, of the Motor Truck Owners' Association of America; John C. Fox, of the City Club; Fred W. Sessions, of the New York State Motor Federation, and Miss Helen Wilson, of the New York State Automobile Association, were among those in attendance. The chief city magistrate presided.

"When I stand at the corner of Bleeker and Lafayette Streets," said the presiding magistrate, in discussing upon his study of traffic conditions, "with its enormous amount of traffic and the large number of people crossing, they somehow give you the impression of chased animals who have become quite expert in dodging vehicles."

"They have acquired a sort of 'vehicular elusiveness'." "The selfish, heartless, reckless or careless driver, who was at first timid, later failed to be cured. Yet I am frank to say that without a less zealous magistrate than Judge House the casualties in the city would have been many times as great."

"With 6,000,000 in this city, we have not to do something."

The figures released yesterday by the National Highway Protective Association showed that the percentage of fatalities in New York State in 1918 over those in 1917.

Sixty-eight killed in January. According to these figures, automobiles killed forty-nine, trolleys, eight, and a wagon, one, in the City of New York during January. During the same period, outside the city, motors accounted for nineteen deaths and trolleys three. This record of sixty-eight killed by automobiles is the largest known for the month of January.

In the State of New Jersey, seven persons were killed by automobiles, four by trolleys and two by wagons during the last month.

"During 1918 there were 1,189 persons killed by automobiles in the state, as against 837 in 1917."

"Eleven hundred operators of motor vehicles were involved in these fatalities," said Colonel Cornell in commenting on the figures of the year, "yet up to the middle of December, 1918, we had less than thirty licenses revoked by the Secretary of State's office. This is a proportion of less than 3 per cent in comparison with the number of persons killed."

Law Inadequate, Says Hugo
Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo explained the "inadequacy of the present law" in particular the insufficient machinery for enforcement. Although New York State had one-fifth of all the automobiles in the United States, he said, but six inspectors are appointed to supervise 200,000 cars and more than 8,000 miles of highways. He asserted that many courts do not inform him of a disposition of cases which come under their jurisdiction.

"Safety lies in a free application of the revocation and suspension of licenses," he said. "I would like to make it possible that no man or woman shall be killed." He said 23,000 men were turned away from the Secretary of State's office because they did not pass the drivers' license examination.

Dr. Harris, speaking for the Police Department, assured his hearers of co-operation. He approved the present traffic license system as well as free application of the revocation of licenses. Magistrate Cobb decided that the power to revoke licenses be vested in the magistrate. However, this did not meet with the complete approval of representatives of the New York State Automobile Association, since they were of the opinion that the revocation of the license outside New York City should not be entrusted with such sweeping powers."

Another meeting will be held soon.

Bond Clew to Missing Girl

Believed to Have Cashed It to Finance Flight

Belief that a Liberty Bond will furnish a clew to the whereabouts of Ethel Joyce, the seventeen-year-old high school girl who disappeared from her home, 424 West 163d Street, last Thursday, has led the police to question at brokers dealing in those certificates.

It is believed the girl left home because of a failure to pass the Regents' examination for graduation from the Julia Richman High School, and, as she had no money, she thought she would borrow $50 bond her father had given her. Joseph B. Joyce, the girl's father, is an accountant for the New York Central Railroad. He attributed her failure at school and her subsequent disappearance to overstudy.

While Captain William D. Harrigan, of I Company, 20th Infantry, was relaxing the guests of the Spring Club at a dinner in the Hotel Astor Friday night with stories of his experiences in France, a sneak thief robbed his apartment at 44 West Forty-sixth Street of articles valued at $1,200.

Captain Harrigan's wife and two friends accompanied him to the dinner. Among the things stolen were two business suits, a valise, two furs, two diamond rings and two watches.

Galli Curci Recital To Aid Sanatorium

Tuberculosis Said to Afflict and Soldiers' Dependents
Nurses Back From France

A Galli Curci recital will be given next Sunday at the Hippodrome for the benefit of Stony Wold Sanatorium, in the Adirondacks. It is the first to be given for this institution in fifteen years, and is necessary to raise funds to combat an after-war spread of tuberculosis in the state.

In the announcement of the benefit it is said many Red Cross nurses are returning from France with tuberculosis, and the disease was contracted by dependents of soldiers in many cases during the absence of the families' breadwinners.

'Trilby' in Reality
Hypnotized Into
Forging of Checks

Alienists Believe They Have
Reincarnation of Du Maurier's Character in Actress, and Police Seek 'Svengali'

In the case of Miss Norma McLeod, a young actress charged with passing a forged check, lawyers, alienists and probation officers connected with Judge Crain's part in General Sessions believe they have an incarnation of George Du Maurier's "Trilby." The "Svengali" in the case is a young actor with whom Miss McLeod had played in stock melodramas.

"When I passed that check," Miss McLeod told the court, "I honestly did not know what I was doing. I had fallen in with a man who was a hypnotist and he doubled up in a mesmeristic vaudeville act, and while under his spell I did many criminal acts."

When arrested on the complaint of Louis Missi, a rooming house keeper at 244 West Forty-eighth Street, on whom she passed one bogus check, Miss McLeod was in a dazed condition. She had been living in Missi's house with the hypnotist and he disappeared after her arrest.

Sufferers Mental Disorder
Dr. Frank A. McGuire, the Tombs physician, who has been interested in the case and became convinced she was suffering from a mental disorder. She displayed such unusual signs of derangement that the court ordered her committed to the insane asylum.

On recommendation of Dr. McGuire a lunacy commission was appointed, and after considerable study of the unusual case the commission recommended continued treatment. Her symptoms decided classification. They indicated that she was in a state bordering on apoplexy. Repeated attempts to awaken her interest in herself and her surroundings past and present failed until a few days ago, when she suddenly showed signs of recovery.

After that Miss McLeod was able and willing to tell the story of her life. She said she did not remember her parents, both of whom died when she was an infant. She was reared by a couple in St. Paul.

Meets "Svengali"

Six years ago, at the age of fifteen, she ran away from home and joined a vaudeville company. Since that time, Miss McLeod said, she had experienced much hardship, and last summer, while out of work, she met the "Svengali" in the case. His name has been given by Dr. McGuire and Probation Officers Daniel Kimball and Mrs. Kate Sprague. Her statements were confirmed. "Persons who knew her in the rooming house testified that Miss McLeod seemed to be completely under the spell of the hypnotist most of the time. Judge Crain issued a bench warrant for the man's arrest, and taking pity on the man's arrest, and taking pity on Miss McLeod, the court suspended sentence on her after she had pleaded guilty, and she was placed in the custody of the probation officers, to whom she will report for several months."

Payne Employee Sues Estate

Says Executors Refuse to Pay
Legacy by Standard Oil Man

Clara Lafranz, for eighteen years in the employ of the Standard Oil Company, sued yesterday in the Supreme Court for $5,000, claiming that the estate of her husband, John Lafranz, who died June 27, 1917, had refused to pay her the $5,000 which she claimed was her share of his estate. She asks for $6,400 with interest from August 16, 1917. The defendants are Payne Whitney, Lewis Cass Ledyard and Lewis Cass Ledyard, Jr., executors. Colonel Payne, who died June 27, 1917, provided that those in his household employ for two years and not otherwise mentioned in his will were to get $3,000 each and $200 a year for each year more than two years. Mr. Lafranz says he had been in Colonel Payne's employ since May 1, 1899, but the executors have refused to pay him.
